

Private Placement Life Insurance (PPLI)--Non-MEC

Description:

PPLI is a life insurance policy designed for high net worth "qualified" investors. PPLI enables the investor to select asset management strategies that are not typically offered in retail life insurance products, including hedge funds. Earnings on policy investments are not taxable to the policy owner as they accumulate within the policy, and when the policy is a non-Modified Endowment Contract, access to policy cash value is tax-free. Death benefit payments also are income tax-free.

Summary of Financial Results:

PPLI policies structured as a non-MEC typically produce returns that are superior to taxable returns from the start. The benefit is enhanced by compounding over time. The greater the return achieved by the investment manager, the greater the advantage of PPLI over a taxable investment environment.

Notes

- Assumes a 10.00% return net of investment management fees in the PPLI separate account.
- Assumes a hypothetical combined state and federal income tax rate on taxable earnings of 40%.
- The policy is designed to qualify as a Non-Modified Endowment Contract (Non-MEC) under current tax law.
- Under current tax law, if the policy is fully surrendered, all investment gains in excess of the policy owner's basis are taxed to the policy owner as ordinary income in the year the policy is fully surrendered. Withdrawals or loans are tax-free to the policy owner.
- Assumes federal DAC taxes are withdrawn from each premium deposit.
- These calculations make assumptions as to future investment returns, mortality costs, and administrative expenses that are not guaranteed. Actual results may be higher or lower.
